About Dan

Dan focuses his practice on real estate litigation, commercial litigation, employment litigation, and construction defect litigation. He also has represented clients with regard to premises liability matters, insurance coverage and bad faith claims, trade secrets litigation, copyright litigation, and trademark litigation.

As part of his real estate litigation practice, Dan has represented clients in cases involving breaches of purchase contracts, foreclosures, commercial landlord/tenant disputes, and claims by and against homeowners associations. Dan's construction defect litigation cases have included claims arising from defective roofing, plumbing, carpentry, excavation, and HVAC systems.

Background

Dan graduated from Capital University Law School, summa cum laude. While in law school, Dan won the First-Year Moot Court Competition and received the competition's Best Oralist Award. Later, he served as the managing editor of the Capital University Law Review. At graduation, Dan received the law school's Dean's Award. In 2014, the law school recognized Dan with the Graduate of the Last Decade Award.
